

CONTENTS

Foreword to the Second Edition by Michael W. Smith	xī
Foreword to the First Edition by Michael W. Smith	xiii
Preface to the Second Edition	xvii
Acknowledgments	xix
Introduction: Really Among Schoolchildren	1
The Reading Struggle	1
Personal Readings	4
Children's Hour	6
Compelling Questions	7
Tentative Answers	8
Setting the Task	10
COMMENTARY: The Human and the Cultural	12
1 ♦ Moving Toward a Reader-Centered Classroom	18
The Bottom-Up Approach	19
Why Johnny Won't Read	20
There Is an Alternative	24

Getting Started	26
Building on Rosenblatt	29
COMMENTARY: Be THE Teacher	32
2 ♦ Looking at Student Reading	38
The Year Begins	39
What Makes Valid Reading?	40
Studying Student Response	41
Three Highly Engaged Readers: Cora, Joanne, and Ron	43
Why Read Literature?	52
COMMENTARY: Looking for Tomorrow Instead of Toward Yesterday—The Power of Teacher Research	54
3 ♦ The Dimensions of the Reader’s Response	61
Classroom Research Methods	61
The Dimensions	67
Surprises	70
Evocative Dimensions	72
Connective Dimensions	88
Reflective Dimensions	97
Epilogue: What We Learned Together About Reading	109
COMMENTARY: Literary Theorists, Hear My Cry!	111
4 ♦ Using Drama to Extend the Reader	119
Why Drama?	121
The Students: Kevin, Marvin, and Libby	126
Before Drama	128
Dramatic Happenings	132
The Moves They Made	135
Reading as Pleasure: “You Have to Live the Story”	143
Epilogue: The Potential of Drama	145
COMMENTARY: Motivation and Methods	147

5 ♦ Reading Is Seeing	153
Still Struggling: Tommy, Walter, and Kae	154
Seeing the Visual Possibility	157
The Visualization Project: Art in the Classroom	161
The Art of Reading	165
Moving Toward a Reflective Response: “The Book Said All That”	176
Epilogue: Opening Doors with Art	179
COMMENTARY: Seeing the Substantive Possibilities	184
6 ♦ Expanding Concepts of Reading, Response, and Literature	188
Reading as Engagement	189
Alternate Texts as Literature	190
Using Student Experiences: Art and Drama Activities	191
The Role of the Teacher	192
The Teacher as Researcher	196
Toward a Critical Literacy	197
COMMENTARY: A Humane and Democratic Classroom	202
Appendix A: Questions and Activities for the Ten Dimensions of Reader Response	207
Appendix B: Revolving Role Drama Lesson Plans for The Incredible Journey	221
References	227
Stories and Poems Cited in the Text	235
Index	237
About the Author	244